Hi, we're a mid-sized logistics firm in Manchester. We want to build an internal tool that reads our supplier PDFs and pulls out delivery dates and line items automatically. Currently three people do this by hand. Budget is around £40,000 and we'd want to start in September. Do you do this kind of thing?

Following up on my earlier note — forgot to mention we're also open to a hosted solution rather than something built from scratch, if that's cheaper. Same project, supplier document extraction. Thanks.

Two things we need help with. First, a patient-facing chatbot that answers questions about our services — must not give medical advice. Second, and this is separate, we need to migrate our existing React admin panel off a legacy backend. The chatbot is urgent (6 weeks), the migration can wait until Q1. Combined budget somewhere between $60k and $90k depending on scope.

ASAP — our tenant portal has been down since Tuesday and the original developer is unreachable. It's a Node app on AWS. We need someone to take it over. Happy to pay whatever it takes to get it back up today, and then discuss a longer maintenance arrangement.

Good afternoon. Following an internal review, our practice has decided to commission a bespoke project management platform tailored to architectural workflows. This would encompass drawing revision control, client approval gateways, consultant coordination, RFI tracking, and integration with our existing accounting software. We anticipate a phased delivery across approximately eighteen months. Our board has provisionally approved a capital allocation in the region of four hundred thousand pounds, subject to a detailed scoping exercise. We would welcome an initial conversation, ideally with someone who has experience in the built environment sector. Please note we are also speaking with two other firms.
